

valley alive as a wildlife corridor as well as a treasured human resource. In this regard, the unceasing efforts made by the Eno River Association, the Durham Inventory Review Committee, and Durham City/County Planning Department again serve as a model that should be lauded and—even more importantly—adopted throughout the entire state.